PREFACE

This report presents statistics on the number of inhabitants of Alaska, its judicial divisions, and minor civil divisions (recording districts). In addition, separate figures are also presented for urban places and other areas of the Territory. These data are based upon tabulations from the Seventeenth Decennial Census of the population of the United States, its Territories, possessions, etc., conducted as of April 1, 1950. Provision for the Seventeenth Decennial Census was made in the act providing for the Fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses which was approved on June 18, 1929.

The major portion of the information compiled from the Census of Population of 1950 will appear in Volume I, Number of Inhabitants, and in Volume II, Characteristics of the Population. This report is a preprint of Chapter 51 (Alaska) of Volume I, which is to present, in a single publication, statistics on the number of inhabitants for each State, Territory, possession, etc.

The materials presented here will also appear as Chapter A of Part 51 (Alaska) of Volume II. Volume II will comprise a series of separately published parts, one for each State and Territory, one for the possessions, etc., and a summary for the United States. The use of separate parts makes the basic materials on characteristics of the population for a given area available to the public in a single publication. Within each part, Chapter A will recapitulate the statistics on the number and distribution of the population; Chapter B will present statistics on the general characteristics of the population of the various political subdivisions; and Chapter C will present data on the detailed characteristics of the population of the larger areas.

The materials presented here were prepared under the supervision of Howard G. Brunsmann, Chief, Population and Housing Division, and Robert B. Voight, Assistant Chief for Operations, by Joel Williams, Chief, Territories and Possessions Statistics Section, assisted by Florence C. Lindsay and Charles P. Brinkman. The collection of the information on which these statistics are based was under the supervision of Lowell T. Galt, Chief, Field Division. The geographic work was under the supervision of Clarence E. Batschelet, Chief, Geography Division.

April 1952.

U. S. CENSUS OF POPULATION: 1950

Volume

- I Number of Inhabitants
- II Characteristics of the Population

Succeeding volumes will cover the following subjects:

Census Tracts, Nativity and Parentage, Nonwhite Population by Race, Persons of Spanish Surname, Institutional Population, Differential Fertility, Labor Force Characteristics, Occupation, Industry, Income, Internal Migration, Education, Characteristics of Families and Households.

U. S. CENSUS OF HOUSING: 1950

Volume

- I General Characteristics
- II Nonfarm Housing Characteristics
- III Farm Housing Characteristics
- IV Residential Financing
- V Block Statistics

Housing statistics for census tracts are to be included in the Population reports on census tracts.

ALASKA

Number of Inhabitants

The Territory.—Alaska was acquired by purchase from Russia in 1867 and was organized as a Territory in 1912. Its population on April 1, 1950, according to the 1950 Census of Population, was 128,643. The Territory has a land area of 571,065 square miles. In 1950 there was an average of 22.5 persons per 100 square miles, as compared with an average of 12.7 in 1939. Among the Territories and possessions of the United States, Alaska ranked third in population and first in land area.

In 1880, Alaska had a population of 33,426 (table 1). In 1950, 70 years later, the population was nearly four times as large. In the decades from 1880 to 1890 and 1910 to 1920, Alaska lost population. Nearly three-fifths of the increase between 1880 and 1950 came between 1939 and 1950, when a gain of 56,119 was recorded. The rate of growth between 1939 and 1950, 77.4 percent, was second only to the rate of 98.4 percent experienced between 1890 and 1900.

The 1880 enumeration was the first in which the population of Alaska was included in a Federal census. This enumeration consisted of a canvass of all accessible settlements, supplemented by estimates, based mainly on records and personal knowledge of missionary priests, for those areas which could not be visited. A similar practice was followed in 1890, but the area actually canvassed in that year was larger than that visited in 1880, and at subsequent censuses the enumeration has generally been more nearly complete.

Usual place of residence.—In accordance with usual Census practice, each person enumerated in the 1950 Census was counted as an inhabitant of his usual place of residence or usual place of abode, which is generally construed to mean the place where he lives and sleeps most of the time. This place is not necessarily the same as his legal residence, voting residence, or domicile, although, in the vast majority of cases, the use of these different bases of classification would produce identical results.

In the application of this rule, persons were not always counted as residents of the places in which they happened to be found by the census enumerators. Visitors found staying in private homes were not ordinarily interviewed there. Information on persons away from their usual place of residence was obtained from other members of their families, landlords, etc. If an entire family was expected to be away during the whole period of the enumeration, information on it was obtained from neighbors. A matching process was used to eliminate duplicate reports for persons who reported for themselves while away and were also reported by their families at home.

Persons in the armed forces quartered on military installations were enumerated as residents of the judicial divisions and recording districts in which their installations were located. Members of their families were enumerated where they actually resided. In the 1950 Census, college students living away from home were considered residents of the communities in which they were residing while attending college, rather than as persons temporarily absent from their parental homes as was the practice in 1939. In 1950 the crews of vessels of the American Merchant Marine in harbors of the Territory were counted as part of the population of the ports in which their vessels were berthed on April 1, 1950. In 1939 such persons were treated as part of the population of the port from which the vessel operated. Inmates of institutions, who ordinarily live there for long periods of time, were counted as inhabitants of the place in which the institution was located; whereas patients in general hospitals, who ordinarily have short stays, were counted at, or allocated to, their homes. All persons without a usual place of residence were counted where they were enumerated.

Urban and rural population.—The 1950 urban population of Alaska comprised 34,262 persons, or 26.6 percent of the total population of the Territory (table 1). The urban population of Alaska comprises all persons living in incorporated and unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; the remainder of the population is classified as rural.

The 1900 Census was the first in which any place in Alaska had a population of 2,500 or more. The two places of this size in 1900—Nome and Skagway—had a combined population of 15,605, or 24.5 percent of the total population of Alaska. In 1910, the two places of 2,500 or more were Nome and Fairbanks. In 1920, only Juneau had more than 2,500 inhabitants; and the proportion of the total population living in places of this size had dropped to 5.6 percent, the lowest percentage during the period 1900 to 1950. In 1929 Ketchikan attained a population of 2,500 or more for the first time. In 1939 Anchorage qualified for the first time, and Fairbanks again attained a population of 2,500 or more. The four places of 2,500 or more in 1939 had a combined population of 17,374. In 1950, two villages, Eastchester and Mountain View, had more than 2,500 inhabitants, bringing the number of urban places to six. The 34,262 persons living in these six places represented an increase of 16,888, or 97.2 percent, over the population in places of this size in 1939.

The 1950 rural population of Alaska comprised 94,381 persons, or 73.4 percent, of the population of the Territory (table 1). Despite decreases in three of the intercensal periods between 1880 and 1950, the rural population in 1950 was nearly three times as large as it had been in 1880. The increase of 39,231 between 1939 and 1950 accounted for nearly two-thirds of the gain in the rural population over the 70 years and represented an increase of 71.1 percent over the 1939 rural population of 55,150.

The 1950 Census of Population is the first in which the population of Alaska has been classified in accordance with urban and rural residence. For comparative purposes, the population at previous censuses has been classified in accordance with the urban definition employed in 1950.

Judicial divisions.—Alaska has no county organization, but in 1909 it was divided into four judicial divisions, which are treated for census purposes as equivalent to counties. The least populous of the judicial divisions was the Second, which had a population of 12,272 (table 3). The most populous was the Third, which had 59,518 inhabitants. All four judicial divisions shared in the increase in population between 1939 and 1950, with the Third leading in both the amount and rate of increase. The gain of 40,206 for the Third Judicial Division was at the rate of 208.2 percent and accounted for more than seven-tenths of the population gain for the Territory. Second in both the amount and rate of increase was the Fourth Judicial Division, which had an increase of 12,556, or 78.0 percent.

Minor civil divisions.—To the primary political divisions into which counties or their equivalents are divided, the Bureau of the Census applies the general term "minor civil divisions." The minor civil divisions in Alaska are the recording districts. Table 4 shows statistics on the population of each judicial division by recording districts for the past three censuses. The number of persons in the recording districts ranged from 30 in the Hyder district of the First Judicial Division to 32,060 in the Anchorage district of the Third Judicial Division.

The population of each incorporated and unincorporated place is shown under the population of the recording district in which it is located. Changes between the 1939 Census and the 1950 Census in the boundaries of the judicial divisions, the recording districts, and the incorporated places are shown in notes to table 4. For changes in boundaries prior to the 1939 Census, see reports of the Sixteenth Census (1940), Population, Vol. I, pp. 1192-1194, and reports of earlier censuses.

Incorporated and unincorporated places.—The incorporated places in Alaska are the cities and the towns. In 1950 there were 26,338 persons living in the 9 cities and 19,292 in the 18 towns. The most populous incorporated place in Alaska was Anchorage, which had a population of 11,254 in 1950, or more than three times as large as in 1939 (table 2). Juneau, the most populous incorporated place in 1939, dropped to second place in 1950. Two additional incorporated places—Fairbanks city and Ketchikan town—had more than 5,000 inhabitants. Port Alexander city, the least populous of the incorporated places, had a population of 22.

Following the precedent of previous censuses of Alaska, a large number of places of settlement recognized locally were enumerated separately. Such places having 25 inhabitants or more are reported as unincorporated places. (Unincorporated places with fewer than 25 inhabitants were reported in 1939.) All unincorporated places are designated as villages. There were 43,142 persons living in the 260 unincorporated places shown in 1950. The largest of the unincorporated places, Eastchester village and Mountain View village, both of which are located in the outskirts of Anchorage, had 3,096 and 2,880 inhabitants, respectively.
